NOTICE REGARDING MUTUAL FUND REDEMPTION FEES & ABUSIVE TRADING

A redemption fee of up to 2% may be charged when shares are sold within specified holding periods of seven days or more (generally 30, 60 or 90 days from date of purchase) although longer holding periods may be imposed by some funds. Redemption fees are intended to limit abusive trading practices, including market timing, and shift costs generated by short-term trading to the shareholder engaged in these practices not the fund or its long-term shareholders. All fees are remitted to the fund to help defray the costs to other shareholders. Redemption fee policies vary from fund to fund, including the circumstances under which a redemption fee, if any, will apply. Please note redemption fees are separate from other fees assessed by a mutual fund and trading restrictions may apply even if a fund does not have a redemption fee.

Mutual fund companies may restrict or prohibit fund purchases or exchanges by individuals identified as having engaged in market timing or excessive trading. A fund may consider two short-term round trip trades as excessive trading. Generally, a short-term round trip trade is defined as the sale/purchase within 60 days of a purchase/sale of the same fund.

You should read the prospectus for each fund in which you invest for details.

To help achieve long-term retirement security, you should give careful consideration to the benefits of a well-balanced and diversified investment portfolio. Spreading your assets among different types of investments can help you achieve a favorable rate of return, while minimizing your overall risk of losing money. This is because market or other economic conditions that cause one category of assets, or one particular security, to perform very well often cause another asset category or another particular security, to perform poorly. If you invest more than 20% of your retirement savings in any one company or industry, your savings may not be properly diversified. Although diversification is not a guarantee against loss, it is an effective strategy to help you manage investment risk.

In deciding how to invest your retirement savings, you should take into account all of your assets, including any retirement savings outside of the Plan. No single approach is right for everyone because, among other factors, individuals have different financial goals, different time horizons for meeting their goals, and different tolerances for risk.

It is also important to periodically review your investment portfolio, your investment objectives, and the investment options under the Plan to help ensure that your retirement savings will meet your retirement goals.
