

MANUFACTURING

When was the last time you calibrated your insurance program? Precision and differentiation are the hallmarks of a successful manufacturing company. Your unique risks and market pressures requires tailored insurance coverages to best protect your business. You also need an insurance agent who will become an integral component of your insurance planning, providing advice and consultation on a year-round basis, not just at renewal time.

At Durham and Bates, we understand the issues and challenges of the manufacturing industry, from securing your raw materials, to the logistics of distribution and your supply chain, on out to the end customer. You need control and flexibility. You need an insurance broker who understands your need to sustain production.
